BROOKLYN MINISTERS AND OTHERS EXCEPT TO HIS MORAL CHARACTER.

REFUSE TO MEET HERRON.

They Refuse to Speak From the Same Platform With the Former Minister-Report From Iowa That He Is to Be Tried, Not

for Heresy, but for Immoral Conduct. The friends of Dr. George D. Herron, the former Congregational minister, now a Socialist, whose wife recently obtained a divorce from him, tendered him a dinner last Socialists, of which Ernest H. Crosby and Darwin J. Meserole are members, and who with others have formed a "committee of of his views. The dinner to him last night was arranged by this committee.

Outside the membership of the committee there were present other persons holding radical views, including Emma Goldman. In the dinner. It was not open to reporters, but views and that those emanating from Dr. Herron were of such a nature as to even win applause and "bravos" from Miss Goldman. The substance of Prof. Herron's talk was that it was not reform this country needed but

Some of Prof. Herron's friends, it is said. became so convinced that he was made of the right kind of stuff that they proposed him then and there as the head of a socialistic ticket in 1904, which Prof. Herron declined on the ground that success could hardly be expected so soon, but might come four years later. Plans were made at the dinner for a course of lectures to be given by Prof. Herron at Carnegle Hall, Mrs. Rand, whose daughter it is said he is to marry, offering to stand good for the rent.

The disclosures concerning Dr. Herron brought out by the divorce suit have created a rather unfavorable sentiment against him in Brooklyn among those who even believe in a free expression of honest opinions. Dr. Herron, before publicity was given to his private life, was invited to speak at the meeting of the Get Together Club i. Brooklyn. Mr. Meserole, who is one of Dr. Herron's sponsors, is a member of the club, and it was at his soliditation that the invitation was extended to the professor, who accepted it.

There were a number of prominent Brooklynites who accepted similar invitations to speak. Among these were the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, Rossiter Raymond, the Rev. Dr. S. D. McConnell and the Rev. Dr. S. D. McConnell and the Rev. Dr. Strong Dr. Hillis, Dr. McConnell and Mr. Raymond have now positively declined to appear on the same platform with Dr. Herron, and Dr. Strong is understood to be considering the matter.

Justice William J. Gaynor is to preside at the dinner if he does not join the defection. Mr. Meserole said last night that three men who were to have spoken had declined, but that he did not think that any others would.

"Will the meeting be held?" asked the a rather unfavorable sentiment against him

"Will the meeting be held?" asked the reporter.
"I presume it will," said Mr. Meserole,
"but I am not sure yet. The men who have declined have a good deal of influence and may induce many to stay away."
Mr. Meserole added that he believed Dr.
Herron to be a man of high character and one whom no one should feel a hesitancy in meeting.

denied emphatically that the report had any foundation. He said:

"It is the first intimation I have ever had that any one had thought of making any such move. Herron has been in the association and Church for eight years, and what Mr. Wentworth, Mr. Herron's agent, pleases to call heresy was as well known five years ago as is the case now. It is probable that charges of conduct unworthy a Christian and a gentleman will be brought against Mr. Herron by the association, based on the decision of the court at Algona, but there will be no hasty action.

The accused will have every reasonable opportunity for defence, if he has any defence of the court will be no hasty action.

First, three men rushed in and shot him; second break in a fight ensued, in which he received a bullet near the heart; third, that when the men came in he drew a revolver which they got away from him and shot him. This is the most likely, as the revolver, found on the office floor was his. Two bullets of 32-caliber found, near the office door fit the revolver found, of which three chambers were empty. Charles J. Chappel, now in the County Jali on suspicion of knowing about the murder, is thought to be entirely innocent. No official announcement of the appointment has been made. but the news comes to a priest of the diocese from a source in Rome which is considered authoritative. The decision to appoint Father O'Connor was, it is believed, made at the last consistory, held about a week

There has been great interest in the diocese over the appointment. It has been generally considered that the choice lay between Father O'Connor and the Right Rev. John M. Farley, auxiliary Bishop of the New York diocese. The official announcement of the appointment of the former is expected in a few days.

Father O'Connor was appointed Vicar-General in 1892, while professor of dogmatic theology at Seton Hall College. In 1895 he became rector of St. Joseph's parish.

He was born in Newark in 1855. His education began in the parochial schools, and was continued at Seton Hall, in South Orange. He entered the college when Bishop McQuade of Rochester was President, and graduated in 1873, when Archbishop Corrigan was President. After four years' study of theology in the American College at Rome Father O'Connor left to continue his study at the more northern University of Louvain, in Belgium. During the year spent at Louvain Father O'Connor was ordained in the Mechlin Cathedral.

He returned to this country in 1878, and at Seton Hall, afterward taking the chair

The lad had the endurance and he of the brook swung his hat as the engine whirled around he saw a man and woman kneeling on the ground. The man appeared to be digging a curve at a rate of forty-five miles an hour. In the dim light of the storm the engineer saw the boy's action. He reversed the engine and came to a stop with the nose of the pilot buried in several tons of rack.

The passengers did not know that they were saved from a wreck by the heroism of a boy until they reached this city.

was appointed by Archbishop Corrigan to DEATH FORESHADOWED BY A DREAM. A Railroad Brakeman Killed, as He Predicted, While Acting as a Switchman.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y. April 22.-Joseph Malzahn, an Ontario and Western Railroad brakeman, was instantly killed while ensaid that any news of the appointment, gaged in the duties of a switchman in this city this afternoon. Malzahn's death was foreshadowed by a dream last night. This morning at the breakfast table his landlady, Mrs Charles W. Brown, on noting his worried countenance, inquired to what it was due, and he predicted, as a result of his dream. that he would meet with an accident. Death came to him in most awful form at 3 o'clock, when he was caught between the switch and the side of a loaded coal car and nearly every bone in his body was crushed. After the car had passed the body fell in front of the ecomotive that was pushing the car into the switch and was cut in two and otherwise

Ran Away After Putting Three-Weck-Old Eov Under Three Feet of Earth- Its Life Saved by Public Works Foreman Who Heard Its

Cries-Couple, Both Italians, Caught. An Italian, who said he was Givrio Butaccavallo, living on the lower East Side of the city, and a pale-faced girl of 18, who refused to say anything about herself, were committed to the Westchester county jail at White Plains last night on a charge of burying a live child beneath three feet of earth at the foot of a ravine bordering the village of Hastings-on-the-Hudson. A contractor's foreman, who dug the child from the grave and saved its life, caused the arrest of the couple. The child may die Buttaccavallo and his companion were arrested on their way from Hastings to Yonkers. The arrest was made on a Warburton avenue trolley car. Warburton avenue is the road that con nects Yonkers with Hastings-on-the-Hudson. It is about five miles in length and extends through a hilly country where there are but few houses. The road crosses a ravine near the Hastings village line, A brook known as Rowley's Brook flows through the ravine. It was on the bank of this brook

Patrick McAvoy, foreman over a gang of laborers, was at work building a railroad trestle over this brook. They were & quarter of a mile from Rowley's bridge, which spans the brook at Warburton avenue. The men quit work at 12:30 o'clock yesterday McAvoy walked toward Warburton ave-

He hasters a first the woman and they crossed varburton avenue and disappeared in a ravine on the other side of the trolley tracks.

McAvoy hurried after them. He saw the man put a hatchet under his coat and he believed that the stranger had used it to bury or to dig up a treasure. When McAvoy got to the crown of the hill on Warburton avenue the man and woman were not in sight. Then he hurried buck to the spot where he had seen the usan digging.

As he approached McAvoy says he heard the crie of a baby. He climbed over a hedge and throwing aside the bush, began to dig up the earth with his hands. After he had re noved about three feet of earth he found a bundle of white clothing, inside of which was a boy baby about 3 weeks old and apparently in good health. The child had good lungs and made use of them. It had been saved from sufforcation by having it face covered with a small cape.

With the child in his arms McAvoy ran to With the child in his arms McAvoy ran to Warburton avenue and boarded a trolley car going toward Hastings. He told the conductor and motorman all about his find. The conductor, William Walsh, said he remembered an Italian couple who had been passengers on a previous trip. He suid the couple had got on his car at Yonkers and left it at Rowley's Bridge. He thought it strange at the time for a woman to get off the car at this point, for most of his passengers rode all the way to the village.

McAvoy rode into Hastings and turned the child over to the first woman he met. This woman was Mrs. Barbara Bauer, the janitress of the village school. McAvoy then ran to the headquarters of the village police and reported the case. Conductor Walsh started on his trip back to Yonkers. About a mile and a half out of Hastings a man and woman signalled the motormen to stop. When Walsh saw the couple he made up his mind that they were the ones who had buried the baby and told the motorman to call the first policeman they met when Yonkers was reached.

At that city the motorman shouted to policeman Archer, and he put the couple under arrest.

The man said in good English that he understood nothing but Italian. He declared that he knew of no reason why he should he arrested The girl wept, and said nothing. Both were taken to police headquarters and questioned by Justice of the Peace Kellogg They shook their heads as if in ignorance of what he was askning. Then he got an Italian interpreter, and again questioned them.

The man said he was Giyrio Buttaccavallo, 4s years old, living on First street, New York, between First and Second avenues, but would not tell the number of his house. He said the young woman was his nicce, and that she was 1s years old. The girl said she was Francesca Spinella. She said that he companion was a married man and the father of four children. When asked about the buried child she declared that she was not married and that she had never borne a child. She added that she knew nothing about the child that had been dug up. When the man was searched a smail hatchet was found on him. Newly dug clay was clinging to it. It was a hatchet such as lathers use.

The Hastings officials were notified of the arrest and McAvoy, the man who had duried the baby.
